"PARDON MY FRENCH"

"BETTY LOU, will you p-l-e-a-s-e answer that phone? It's probably for you anyway," called Mother from the kitchen.

I wanted to yell out, "Would you answer it just this once, Mom? Please, Please, Mom." But I knew I would have to talk to him sooner or later, so I picked up the phone with clammy fingers.

"Hello, Betty?" (He always used to call me "Blue Eyes") "I'm going to the beach for the summer in a few days and before I leave I'd like to stop by and ask you something, will you be in?"

"Yes, I'll be home, Buzz, but I—"

"I'll be around 'bout eight. 'Bye."

So this was how it was going to end. I knew he wanted to ask for his frat pin, so I took off the beautiful pearl and gold pin that I had worn so proudly on all my sweaters, and placed it carefully on a piece of cotton in a bright red box that I had been saving for Buzz's birthday present. My mind seemed to be going in circles and my only thoughts were how could this happen to us, Buzz and Bett, the popular two-some at Lane High. For three whole heavenly months Buzz Bennett and I went steady, and now this was the end. As I stared at the box in my hand I wished over and over again that this could be March ninth, the most memorable day in my sixteen years.

March ninth was the day I became a pledge in Delta Chi Sorority, the club I dreamed of belonging to since the day I became a Freshman. Gloria Allen, Brenda Brooks and all the rest of the popular girls in school would soon be my Sorority sisters. As my eighth of an inch pledge pin shined on my blouse I walked into the school cafeteria dressed in the special pledgee costume of two different color socks, eight pigtails tied with bright bows, no lipstick (that was the worst punishment) and carrying my Mother's old washing pail with a dead fish in it. When I saw my future sorority sisters I had to get down on my hands and knees and make a speech declaring, that as a lowly pledge, I was inferior. This was the worst part of initiation; but I wanted to be a member so badly that I decided I would make the best of it and have fun.

As I saw Gloria Allen walking towards me, I quickly fell to my knees to make my big speech. I finally got out the last words, ". . . and I am lower than a snake in the grass," when I looked up into a pair of big, brown, friendly eyes, belonging to the editor of the school newspaper, Buzz Bennett. I knew that I was blushing and I wished more than anything that I were a snake in the grass and could climb between the blades, until a soft, but deep voice said, "You're the cutest pledge I've ever seen. After a speech like that, wouldn't you like a coke?"

I was so thrilled I could hardly get out a word, but I managed a quick "I'd love it." We finally found a table at the far end of the cafeteria, but I somehow had the feeling that he was just being nice to me because he knew how embarrassed I was. After all, someone as popular as Buzz Bennett couldn't possibly be attracted to me in this outfit. The bell for class rang a few minutes later and before I could reply I was pushed in line to go to French class. I thought I heard Buzz say, "So long, Blue Eyes, call you tonight," but I wasn't sure.

French class was boring and all my mind would concentrate on was Buzz Bennett . . . would he call me, did he like me, even a little? When Professor LeRou finally waved 'Au Revoir" I dashed out of class hoping to meet Buzz, but instead I bunked into Le Roy Salle, the smartest boy in the French class.

"How about preparing for our French midterm together?" asked Le Roy. "You know, Betty Lou, it's going to be difficult and you need a good grade in all your subjects. I'd be glad to help you."

"I'm sorry, Le Roy, but I'm busy and I won't be able to study with you, 'Bye for now," I politely replied.

That evening I tried awfully hard to study, but my mind wandered to the incident in the cafeteria. About 8:30 I heard Mother call, "It's for you, Betty Lou. Someone by the name of Buzz something or other." I was the happiest girl in the world as I told Buzz I would be glad to go to the movies with him Saturday night. March ninth turned out to be just perfect, in fact, the nicest day I had ever known.

Sebasol Method Supported By Diverse Medical Opinions

Leading medical authorities differ on the importance of various contributing factors to externally caused acne and pimples.

These factors are: diet, vitamin deficiency, personal hygiene, occupational exposures and postural habits.

The Sebasol method recognizes the importance of all these contributing factors and each of them is an integral part of the Sebasol treatment.

The Sebasol method is not designed to relieve all skin disturbances, and is not prescribed to treat individual cases due to systemic causes. But, to our knowledge, the Sebasol method is the only complete treatment of its type offered to sufferers of common skin maladies. Until new facts are discovered, there is nothing known to science which can do more for the relief of bad skin.

The weeks following Buzz and I were a constant twosome around school, wherever we went it was Buzz and Betty. The Social Bug Column in the Lane high paper always had our name in it. Buzz and Betty were seen at the Saturday night dance, or the most popular couple at the frat picnic were Buzz and Betty singing a cute variety song.

Pledge period ended just before the middle of April when mid examination week began. Although Buzz and I didn't see each other for a whole long week I thought about him constantly. I studied harder than ever before, but I couldn't seem to retain all the facts. Did I or mean to see or did it mean green? What was the French idiom for, it is hot? Everything was a mumble jumble.

"How'd you do on the exam, Betty?" inquired Le Roy one warm afternoon in May.

"Oh, I don't know." I must run along to meet Buzz now. 'Bye."

"Don't forget me if you ever want some help. Just call."

With a quick thank you I dashed out the end corridor to meet Buzz under Our tree, the large maple at the far end of of the campus where Buzz asked me to be his girl and wear his frat pin. With the exams over and walking hand in hand with Buzz talking about summer vacation everything seemed rosy until I saw Mother standing on the porch with a strange look in her eyes.

"There's a letter for you Betty Lou." I opened it by accident. It's from the Dean." Mother said firmly when Buzz left.

Tears came to my eyes quickly as I read. "Dear Betty Lou, In consideration of the fact that you did not meet the passing grade in French for mid semester, I am required to remove your name from the list of eligible sophomores to be installed in the Delta Chi Sorority during final week in June. If you care to discuss the matter with me, I would be glad to be of some assistance to you. Sincerely yours, Dean Miller."

The following day I did not meet Buzz, instead I went to see the Dean, a kind and understanding woman, who listened my explanation. When she said, "Betty Lou, you can have one more chance since your other grades are good. If, on your final examination in June, you get a good grade I will put your name back on the installation list." I was happy that there was still a possibility of becoming a Delta Chi.

My first thought on leaving the Dean's office was to find Le Roy Salle. I finally found him walking down the main street in town. He said he was glad to help me and I was truly grateful to have a friend like him. While walking home we practiced the verb tenses, and it wasn't until we reached the front gate of my house that I realized I had forgotten all about meeting Buzz under our maple tree.

"Betty Lou," called Mother, "what happened during your appointment?" As I finished telling her how lucky I was to have another chance, the phone rang.

"Oh hello Buzz I'm sorry I forgot about our date. No I won't be able to see you tonight. Have to help Mom. Bye." I didn't like telling Buzz something that wasn't true but I was so ashamed of not passing and the probability of not becoming a sorority sister.

One afternoon I picked up the school paper, and to my surprise read a short paragraph in the Social Bug Column.

"Betty Lou Carter and Le Roy Salle are a new twosome around school. Where has Buzz Bennett been keeping himself, could it be on Gloria Allen's porch?"

Buzz and I didn't see much of each other the next few weeks. When we met he was always sweet, but he acted kind of funny as if he knew I was hiding something.

"Betty Lou, it's nearly eight. You'd better hurry. Buzz will be here soon."

Mother's voice jarred me out of the past and back into the present.

I kept staring at the pin. I wished I had told Buzz the truth at the beginning. Now it was the end. The doorbell rang and I picked up the little box with my precious pin.

"Hello, Buzz, I guess you came for this, so here it is." Thanks for letting me wear it." I said as I choked down my tears.

"Betty Lou, don't you want to wear it anymore?" he asked nervously. "After Gloria Allen told me why you were seeing Le Roy I realized I was just being foolish. How could anyone as sweet as you be untruthful? We're going to have a wonderful summer."

Oh, Buzz!" I sighed, as I put my sorority key on his chain.
